

JBC LIVE SERIES:

COMMITTAL PROCEEDINGS AND CONTEMPT OF COURT IN CIVIL PRACTICE

Committal proceedings empower the courts to hold a person in contempt for refusing to obey a court order. Committal ensures that due administration of justice is possible and that litigants do not disregard court orders. The procedure that underlies committal applications is contained in Order 52 of the Rules of Court 2012, although a substantial portion of this is drawn from common law.

Come join this insightful seminar where the speaker will address the following topics:

- Applications for committal – Order 52 of the Rules of Court 2012
- Requirement for a penal notice – Order 45, rule 7 of the Rules of Court 2012
- When the Court can cite for contempt of its own motion
- Discussion of the procedural aspects of committal applications – what must and must not be in the papers, which documents are to be filed, etc
- What are the common errors made by legal practitioners?
- What happens after a person is cited for contempt?
- Sentencing
- Mitigating factors

This Webinar seeks to expound upon the finer points of committal applications, which are a necessary evil at the best of times.
